To the one who stole my heart

Today feels like any other day on the outside, but inside, my heart is writing your name with every beat. I love you in every moment, in every breath, in every quiet space I find between thoughts. There is not a single second I do not carry you with me.

Lately, I find myself wondering if I am truly worthy of your love. You, who shine so effortlessly. You, whose presence feels like a miracle. I am just a simple man with big dreams, trying to turn my hopes into something real. I feel like an office boy standing in front of a goddess, asking if he may hold her hand through life. I feel small sometimes, but never in my love for you. In that, I am endless.

I know I am not perfect. When you said I do not have friends, it struck a quiet place in me. I am trying, Sayang. I really am. I want to grow into someone you can be proud of. Someone who stands tall beside you, not behind you.

Also, I want to say sorry. If asking for your social media access made you uncomfortable, please know that it was never to control you. It came from fear, from love, from my own insecurities. I am learning. I am healing. And I am trying to be better, not just for myself, but for us.

And if loving you someday costs me my peace, if it ever brings heartbreak, or even if it takes my final breath, I will still choose to love you. Not because I expect anything in return, but because loving you is my truth. You are my reason and my forever.

I am so proud to have you, Hidayah. I call you my treasure not out of habit, but out of deep admiration. You are not just my present. You are my always.

Forever and Always
Baby
